This celebration of cemeteries across America takes an unusual and informative look at graves, monuments, family plots, sculpture and the way cemeteries interconnect with many aspects of modern American culture. Traveling from Key West to central Alaska, the program features examples of burial grounds as special sites where history and art are preserved, where flowers and trees can be important attractions, where people make pilgrimages to the final resting places of the famous and the familial, and where old and new traditions often combine in fascinating ways. Rick Sebak narrates.

An unusual colony for writers in the bucolic town of Marshall, Illinois, the Handy Writers' Colony and its quixotic leader, Lowney Turner Handy, provided a refuge for would-be writers during the 1950s. Lowney was both mistress and mentor to the colony's charter member, James Jones, whose breakout novel, "From Here to Eternity," was a publishing sensation. Together, they came to believe that she could turn anyone into a great author. Narrated by Nick Clooney and featuring the voice of Jane Alexander as Handy, the film is a story of one woman's passion to change the course of American literature. The program explores the turbulent 15 years of this literary experiment.

"Dissonance and Harmony: Arabic Music Goes West" offers new imagery of Arabs, not as patently anti-American, not as terrorists, but as artists, universally familiar in their struggle to share their talent and ideas. The film follows an eclectic mix of Middle Eastern musicians from their own specific turf in the Middle East to the United States. In Los Angeles, they collaborate with other gifted musicians from the West, finding common ground between two cultures in conflict.

In the second segment, Michael Wood explores the greatest British myth: the tale of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. Traveling around the Celtic world from Cornwall to Wales, Brittany, Ireland and Scotland, Wood uncovers the extraordinary story of how a shadowy Welsh freedom fighter - a Dark Age Che Guevara - became a medieval superman and, finally, the model of a Christian hero. On the way, viewers discover the real stories behind the Round Table, Excalibur and the Holy Grail itself: the unattainable, mystical cup of Christ, which has inspired poets, novelists and filmmakers from the Middle Ages right down to Indiana Jones, Monty Python and "The Da Vinci Code." In an intriguing piece of historical detective work, Wood offers a tantalizing glimpse of a historical Arthur - but in the unlikeliest of places.

How do American hosts entertain a monarch who has visited nearly every country on earth and dined with 10 U.S. presidents over the course of her 55-year reign? "The State Visit" follows the elaborate preparations as four localities get ready for a visit from the queen. At the site of the United States' first permanent British settlement in Jamestown, Virginia, the chief archeologist brushes up on royal etiquette. In Williamsburg, Virginia, nervous hotel staff make sure they prepare Her Majesty's room to an exacting standard of perfection. The White House hosts the first and only white-tie dinner of the administration and plans for every contingency, including canine misbehavior. In the royal household, they've invited celebrity photographer Annie Liebovitz for a formal photo shoot with the queen, although Liebovitz's request to seat Her Majesty on a horse inside the state apartments proves a bit too much. In exclusive interviews, Liebovitz shares her desire to capture the essence of monarchy, First Lady Laura Bush personally leads a private tour of the White House and the queen's press secretary reveals the challenges of keeping up with her boss. Behind the scenes and at her side from beginning to end, "The State Visit" shows what it takes to plan and execute an official visit from the queen.

THE RAPE OF EUROPA relates how Europe's art treasures survived the systematic theft and deliberate destruction perpetrated by Germany's Third Reich during World War II. For 12 years, the Nazis looted and destroyed art on a scale unprecedented in history, but heroic young art historians and curators from America and Europe fought to rescue and return millions of lost, hidden and stolen treasures. The legacy of this tragic time in history continues to play out today as families recover looted works of art and nations fight over the ill-gotten spoils of war. Joan Allen narrates.

Irving Berlin pulled himself up from poverty on New York's Lower East Side to become America's most famous and enduring songwriter. Born Israel Baline in Belarus, then part of the Russian empire, on May 11, 1888, he immigrated with his family to America at age five and later taught himself rudimentary piano while working as a singing waiter in a bar and brothel in New York's Chinatown. By age twenty-three, he was the wunderkind of Tin Pan Alley with more than two hundred hit songs and hundreds more to come--songs like "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," and "God Bless America." Who was Irving Berlin, and what does his music say about America?

This week Think Tank with Ben Wattenberg takes a look at "Irving Berlin's America," Part Two of a two-part show. From Ragtime to Swing and from Broadway to Hollywood, Irving Berlin's music defined American songwriting for more than half a century. Songs like "God Bless America," "There's No Business Like Show Business," "Cheek to Cheek," and "White Christmas." Fully half of his eight hundred and ninety-nine published tunes went on to become hits. Two hundred and eighty-two reached the top ten on the popular charts; thirty-five went to number one. Berlin's music reflects an almost instinctive understanding of the culture and the early events of what has been called the American century. His songs capture the heart of small town America and the brass of Broadway. Who was Irving Berlin? What is there about his music that still stirs and unites Americans? To find out, Think Tank is joined by Linda Emmet, the second of Irving Berlin's three daughters, and music historian Robert Kimball, co-editors of the just-published book, "The Complete Lyrics of Irving Berlin," and Philip Furia, Professor at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and author of "Irving Berlin, a Life in Song."

IN DREAMS is the climactic and inspiring life and times - and music - of first generation Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame inductee Roy Orbison. This major one-hour documentary film deals with the saga of pop’s most enigmatic and often underappreciated pioneer. For Orbison, whose rock and roll career spanned the 1950's through the 80's, ambition and stardom always took a back-seat to the purity and essence of his art, which history has judged to be a cornerstone of 20th century popular music. Heartbreak was no stranger to Orbison, who lost his first wife Claudette in a motorcycle accident in June of '66, and again only a year later lost two of their sons in a tragic fire. The melancholy in his songs resonated with listeners of all ages, but especially heartsick teenagers who knew how it felt to lose in love. He mesmerized an entire generation of fans in America - and more importantly, enduringly, through the U.K. and Europe with such classics as: "Only The Lonely," "Crying," "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Blue Bayou," and "You Got It" all of which are performed throughout the course of IN DREAMS. With this release, a wider audience than ever can now look, listen and learn what the legend of Roy Orbison was all about.

Wind is the fastest growing energy source in the world, yet it has struggled for acceptance in the United States. However, in Southwest Minnesota, wind energy is a growing source of local energy and income for farmers. Elsewhere, local farmers have taken it upon themselves to form wind co-ops, with the same positive economic results. The Minnesota state government plays a key role in wind policy, begging the question: will the rest of the U.S. follow Minnesota's lead?

On June 22, 1969, the polluted Cuyahoga River caught fire. The river didn’t burn just in Cleveland -- it burned in the nation’s imagination.

The country was beginning to pay attention to what was happening to its natural resources. The fire started a chain of events that hasn't stopped yet. These include the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, Earth Day, the creation of environmental protection agencies at the federal and state levels and a rapidly growing consciousness in America about the environment. The Cuyahoga is America's best example yet of a watery success story. The dead river came clean -- and back to life again.

Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

With gas prices spiking and home values crumbling, the American dream of commuting to work from the fringes of suburbia has become an American nightmare. Many are facing a hard choice: Paying for gas or paying the mortgage. How did it come to this? It's not just about America's financial crisis; it's also about big problems with our national infrastructure. Overstressed highways and too few public transportation options are wreaking havoc on people's lives and hitting the brakes on our already-stretched economy. This week, NOW on PBS takes a close-up look at our inadequate transportation network and visits some people paying a high price - in both dollars and quality of life - just to get to work. Do we have the means to modernize both our infrastructure and our lifestyles? This is the first installment in "Blueprint America," a year-long, PBS-wide series focusing on the nation's infrastructure. "Blueprint America" is an initiative of Thirteen/WNET.

The big bailout, the big debate - we take it all apart and put it together again, tonight on "Washington Week." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Nice to meet you. Can I call you Joe?" The vice presidential debate. Both candidates came with talking points prepared. Gov. Palin said, "I may not answer the questions the way that either the moderator or you want to hear, but I'm going to talk straight to the American people and let them know my track record also. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "Vice President Cheney has been the most dangerous president we've had probably in American history." And they met against the backdrop of another dramatic debate: this one in Washington. Pres. George Bush said, "There were moments this week when some thought that the federal government could not rise to the challenge." But after a week of acrimony and news of bad new job numbers, Congress finally passed the financial bailout bill. We look at the week's drama with the reporters covering it: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Under a dozen days to go. We look at battlegrounds, trends, and what to watch for on the final march to Election Day, tonight on "Washington Week." The sounds of the season. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I feel like we've got a righteous wind at our backs here, but we're going to have to work." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thirteen days to go to the election and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it. He'll say anything to get elected." Sen. Obama said, "He's been on the attack. That's what you do when you're out of ideas, when you're out of touch, and you're running out of time." Sen. McCain said, "We don't want a president who invites testing from the world at a time when our economy is in a crisis and Americans are already fighting in two wars." Add to that, Joe the plumber, Sarah Palin's price tags, and Joe Biden's assertion that Obama would face a crisis once elected. A critical week, a critical time, and the balance of power in Congress at stake as well. We'll talk about it all with David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

On October 29, 1929, the lifelong dreams of hundreds of thousands of stock market investors -- middle-class secretaries, clerks, small businessmen -- vanished in a few hours, along with their hard-earned savings. Decades later, the events of this day still haunt the American psyche. This program examines the boom before the crash, whether the crash was predictable, and if it precipitated the Great Depression of the 1930's.

Can something as common as building materials represent an opportunity to create jobs, help the needy, and save the planet? This week, NOW looks at two "green" projects keeping furniture, paint, cabinets, and other building supplies out of landfills and getting them into the hands of those who need them most. Will they be devastated by the economic meltdown, or do they signal a possible way out? Based in the Bronx, New York, Greenworker Co-operatives aims to set up worker-owned green businesses. The first of these is Rebuilders Source, a store that sells recycled and donated building materials at affordable prices-items that would otherwise have ended up in a landfill. "My vision now is a completely green South Bronx," says Bronx-born entrepreneur Omar Freilla, the founder of Greenworker Co-operatives, "with businesses throughout the area that are owned and run by people living in the area together." On the other side of the country, in Southern California, Materials Matter matches donations of furniture and high quality building materials with individuals, organizations, and homeless shelters that use the materials to literally rebuild lives. But the faltering economy has had an impact. "We have to decide whether the value of that donation will be worth the cost of transportation," says Materials Matter co-founder Alison Riback on her blog. "[The economic downturn] put a huge dent in our 'always say yes to a donation' philosophy." This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

President-Elect Barack Obama. Need I say more? Tonight, on "Washington Week." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer." From Tuesday's uplift to Friday's reality. Obama said, "Immediately after I become president, I'm going to confront this economic crisis head on." Obama's convincing victory as wide as it was deep. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We fought. We fought as hard as we could. And though we fell short, the failure is mine, not yours." How did the Democrat do it? And what does he do now? We look back at a remarkable campaign and ahead to a challenging transition with the reporters who've been covering it: James Barnes of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market. It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

What role did the credit rating agencies play in the current economic crisis? This week, a former managing director at Standard & Poor's speaks out on U.S. television for the first time about how he was pressured to compromise standards in a push for profits. Frank Raiter reveals what was really going on behind closed doors at the credit rating agencies the public relies on to evaluate the safety of their investments. "During this period, profit was primary; analytics were secondary," Raiter tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. Who was watching the watchers? Surprising new revelations about the economic debacle, this week on NOW.

As President-elect Barack Obama unveils his top economic team, a leading progressive thinker challenges America's next leader with a controversial plan for economic recovery. Robert Kuttner, author of the new book "Obama's Challenge," talks to NOW on PBS about the enormous obstacles to -- and potential solutions for -- getting America's economy back on track. Kuttner offers his advice on how Obama should stimulate a recovery: spending $600-700 billion per year over several years to fundamentally change the economy. "We need the government big time to prevent this from becoming the Great Depression II," Kuttner tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Will Obama usher in the most sweeping reforms since the New Deal to get the economy working again?

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Three press conferences in three days, what more do we know about Barack Obama's economic rescue plan, and are the terror attacks in India his first big test, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "This isn't about big government or small government. It's about building a smarter government that focuses on what works." So what do we know this week about how Barack Obama will govern? Obama said, "Budget reform is not an option. It's a necessity. We have to put people back to work." Will a brand new economic advisory board do the trick? Obama said, "Understand where the vision for change comes from first and foremost. It comes from me. That's my job." We look at the future with Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Todd Purdum of Vanity Fair.

Investing in America has been a global trend of the past decade. Now with global economic turmoil, many experts are discussing ways our country can invest in itself. On the campaign trail, Senator Barack Obama promised that his presidency would give America a boost through infrastructure projects - a trend that goes back at least as far as the canal building frenzy hundreds of years ago. To discuss what the coming Obama administration may do, Think Tank is joined by Robert Hormats - Vice Chairman of Goldman Sachs International and author of the important book "The Price of Liberty" that chronicles the cost of America's wars. It was published in 2007. The topic before the house: Investing in America - path to prosperity.

Bad economic news all over, uncertainty on the foreign policy front as well. What's next? Tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "We can't allow the auto industry simply to vanish." But the future of the auto industry is just the beginning of the problems facing the president-elect as he prepares to tackle a complicated new task. Jobs are going away. Industries are teetering. And our holiday season shopper is staying home. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Inaction is not the option here. We need to try and get something done." But who will take the needed action? As the Obama cabinet begins to take shape, new definitions of diversity. Obama said, "I assembled this team because I'm a strong believer in strong personalities and strong opinions." Covering the week David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

The bailout blowout and the strange twisted tale of a Senate seat for sale, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We simply cannot ask the American taxpayer to subsidize failure." Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? Covering the week, David Sanger of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

A PLACE OF OUR OWN is the English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody Award-winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help them be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

This election year, the most crucial battleground states may fall far west of the Mississippi. Strategists say New Mexico, Nevada, and Colorado are pivotal to Senator McCain's success, so how are these voters being courted? This week, NOW on PBS travels to New Mexico to see how both campaigns are hoping to attract - and secure - first time voters on college campuses, as well as voters in New Mexico's large Hispanic population. It's clearly anyone's game - this southwestern state was won by fewer than 400 votes in 2000, and 6,000 votes in 2004. NOW sits down with New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson, a supporter of Barack Obama and a former 2008 presidential contender himself, who affirms the political importance of the "New West." "Had Kerry won those states [in 2004]," Richardson tells Maria Hinojosa, "even having lost Ohio, he'd be President." Will the New West play a key role in determining the fate of the country?

What do movie special effects, the stock market, heart attacks and the rings of Saturn have in common? They're all connected by a revolutionary new branch of math called fractals, which has changed the way we see the world and opened up a vast new territory to scientific analysis and understanding. NOVA tells the dramatic story of a group of pioneering mathematicians who developed fractals from a curiosity that few took seriously to an approach that is touching nearly every branch of understanding - including what happened after the Big Bang and the ultimate fate of our universe.

According to a government study, by the year 2020, there could be a nationwide shortage of up to one million nurses, which could result in substandard treatment for hundreds of thousands of patients. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. "If there was ever a time in the history of this country when one thought about the match between a profession and the changing needs of people in the country, this is the time," Dr. Mary Naylor of the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing tells NOW on PBS. Dr. Naylor points out the growing population of older people, many of whom are living with chronic conditions, is significantly increasing the demand for nurses. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at how the shortage of nurses is placing strains on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend. Can America solve its nursing crisis?

Over the past 50 years the number of students in America has doubled and the number of teachers has tripled. However, students in the United States are underperforming compared to many countries. What does the government need to do under the next president to foster excellence in the classroom? Joining THINK TANK to discuss this issue are Chester Finn, president of the Thomas B. Fordham Foundation and author of "Troublemaker: A Personal History of School Reform Since Sputnik," and Richard Kahlenberg, a senior fellow at the Century Foundation. The topic before the house: Grading our Classrooms.

A PLACE OF OUR OWN is the English-language companion to the Spanish-language series LOS NIÑOS EN SU CASA. Both series are designed for parents and anyone else who takes care of young children: grandparents, nannies, babysitters and home daycare providers. The series covers subjects such as tantrums, literacy, preventing obesity, and speech and language delays. These Peabody Award-winning series combine an entertainment format -- the daytime talk/demonstration show -- with solid educational information on how young children learn, and what adults need to know to help them be prepared for kindergarten and beyond.

Given that 90% of materials from buildings have potential for reuse, the partners of 2012 Architekten are realizing the full value of "recyclicity" and making surplus superfluous. "Waste is our nature," they say, as everything from I beams, wood floors, car tires, washing machines, stainless steel sinks and even windmill blades, comprise the materials from which they build. 2012 Architekten is suggesting not only a new kind of aesthetic and functionality in sustainable architecture, but also a new approach to design and a consideration of transport costs. Finally, they are not content to stop at architecture; through their website www.superuse.org, they are promoting a sustainable agenda -- and smaller-scale recyclicity -- in product design.

This program revisits the event that led to the Indian Ocean's previously most-devastating tsunami, the eruption of the volcano Krakatoa. Using dramatic recreations and CGI, the program brings the May 20, 1883 eruption to life. The eruption reduced the island of Krakatoa to a third of its former size and sent waves that reportedly topped 100 feet high crashing onto Asian shores, killing 36,000. Portions of the program tie the resulting tsunami destruction to the December 26, 2004, tsunami.

On Canada's remote Ellesmere Island, where June is spring, July is summer and August is already autumn, the race is on for two remarkable species to raise their families. The white gyrfalcon is enormous, the largest and most powerful falcon in the world. Yet last summer, the nesting falcon pair on the island failed to raise any young. The rare Arctic wolves rely on every member of the pack to chase and bring down the prey that keep them alive. Last year was good for them and they raised three cubs. But for the wolves and the falcons, as well as the snowy owls, musk oxen, lemmings, Arctic foxes and hares who share this fragile ecosystem with them, fortunes are always precarious. What will happen this year?

Can something as common as building materials represent an opportunity to create jobs, help the needy, and save the planet? This week, NOW looks at two "green" projects keeping furniture, paint, cabinets, and other building supplies out of landfills and getting them into the hands of those who need them most. Will they be devastated by the economic meltdown, or do they signal a possible way out? Based in the Bronx, New York, Greenworker Co-operatives aims to set up worker-owned green businesses. The first of these is Rebuilders Source, a store that sells recycled and donated building materials at affordable prices- items that would otherwise have ended up in a landfill. "My vision now is a completely green South Bronx," says Bronx-born entrepreneur Omar Freilla, the founder of Greenworker Co-operatives, "with businesses throughout the area that are owned and run by people living in the area together." On the other side of the country, in Southern California, Materials Matter matches donations of furniture and high quality building materials with individuals, organizations, and homeless shelters that use the materials to literally rebuild lives. But the faltering economy has had an impact. "We have to decide whether the value of that donation will be worth the cost of transportation," says Materials Matter co-founder Alison Riback on her blog. "[The economic downturn] put a huge dent in our 'always say yes to a donation' philosophy." This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

"March Point" follows the journey of three teens from the Swinomish Tribe who have been asked to make a film about the threat their people face from two local oil refineries. In the late 1950s, two refineries were built on March Point, an area that was once part of the Swinomish reservation by treaty. This is the story of the boys' awakening to the destruction these refineries have wrought in their communities. Ambivalent environmental ambassadors at the onset, the boys grapple with their assignment through humor, sarcasm and a candid self-knowledge. But as their filmmaking evolves, they experience the need to understand and tell their stories, and the power of this process to change their lives. By Tracy Rector and Annie Silverstein.

Unique to North America, the bald eagle is the continent's most recognizable aerial predator, with a shocking white head, electric yellow beak and penetrating eyes. In the 1960s, this symbol of the United States became an emblem of environmental degradation, as the pesticide DDT and other human pressures brought it to the brink of extinction. Following their protection as an endangered species, bald eagles have come roaring back. Photographed by three-time Emmy-winning cinematographer Neil Rettig, this first-ever HD hour on bald eagles focuses on the drama of the nest. Even in the best of times, it's a surprisingly tough struggle to maintain a one-ton home and raise chicks until they can hunt on their own. Paris' ambitious public-private "Vélib" bike initiative encourages residents to forgo cars for bikes and public transportation. In the process, the program has fostered a unique popular culture, complete with its own language, jokes and pick-up lines. If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, Paris Mayor Bertrand Delanoe has undoubtedly taken heart: Its success has inspired cities like São Paulo, Venice and London to begin adopting similar programs.

In the 21st-century global food economy, by the time it's been grown, processed and distributed, most food has traveled an average of 1,500 miles before reaching the plate. As renowned author Michael Pollan elaborates, the effects of this fossil fuel-driven system are detrimental to the environment, to health and to social well-being. Writer Michael Shuman argues that investing in local food systems lessens the geographic and psychological distance between who we are and what we eat.

In the windswept, hostile environment of Antarctica, National Geographic's Crittercam team and Doctors Jerry Kooyman and Paul Ponganis of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography embark on a spectacular adventure of science and survival. Using Crittercam technology, they hitch a ride with the majestic emperor penguin to go places only penguins have gone before -- under the massive Ross Ice Shelf. Crittercam -- a revolutionary animal-borne research tool that records images, sound and data from an animal’s perspective -- allows researchers, scientists and filmmakers to gather data about behavior and habitats that humans cannot otherwise observe.

Deep in the Congo lives a little-studied group of apes called the bonobos. Like chimpanzees, bonobos are among humans' closest relatives. But unlike chimps, known for their violent behavior, bonobos are far more peaceful, even matriarchal. They embrace their neighbors and resolve conflict in an unusual way - by having sex. Much like humans, bonobos have sex not just to procreate, but for pleasure as well. The discovery of these more gentle ape traits has fascinated scientists and led them to question our origins and the roots of human nature as a whole. But in 1997, just as research on these elusive apes was getting off the ground, civil war broke out in the Congo. Bonobo researchers were forced to evacuate immediately, leaving behind the astonishing apes they were studying. Now, years later, NOVA returns to the Congo with veteran bonobo researchers who are worried that war and the bush meat industry may have decimated the bonobo population. What they find gives them hope for the future of the species. The program tells the intimate, emotional story of these amazing apes, detailing their survival and the experiences of the scientists who have followed them so closely for so long.

Just this week, a top UN official predicted that by the middle of this century, the world should expect six million people a year to be displaced by increasingly severe storms and floods caused by climate change. But for many island nations in the South Pacific, climate change is already more than just a theory - it is a pressing, menacing reality. These small, low-lying islands are frighteningly vulnerable to rising temperatures and sea levels that could cause flooding and contaminate their fresh water wells. Within 50 years, some of them could be under water. This week, NOW travels to the nation of Kiribati to see up close how these changes affect residents' daily lives and how they are dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth. We also travel to New Zealand to visit an I-Kiribati community that has already left its home, and to the Pacific Island Forum in Niue to see how the rest of the region is coping with the here-and-now crisis of climate change.

The divisions between Iraq's Shia, Sunnis and Kurds throughout the country are represented in the courtroom. The documentary closely examines, for the first time, the full process of trying, convicting and sentencing Saddam Hussein, highlighting the lawyers involved, the multiple judges who presided over the case, the verdict and the sentence - execution. With evidence of tampering and claims of mischaracterization of justice, was this truly a model of judiciary practice for a fledgling democracy?

"Jimmy Carter" traces the ascent of an ambitious country boy from a peanut farm in Plains, Georgia, to the Oval Office; it examines the failings of Carter's political leadership in the context of the turbulent 1970s and explores the role religion played in his career. Jimmy Carter rode into power on the post-Watergate disaffection with Washington politics, but his inexperience resulted in an ineffectual and fractured administration. The crowning achievement of his one term in office, the Camp David Accords that established a framework for peace in the Middle East, was the inspiration for his life after the White House. In the years since, Carter has recast himself as a giant of moral leadership, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in the process. He has struggled to bring peace to war-torn countries; fought for the eradication of life-threatening diseases; and dedicated himself to housing America's poorest citizens.

LATINOS '08 examines the 2008 election through the prism of ethnic politics. Latinos are less cohesive than other voting blocs, and they do not fit the black/white racial binary that has long shaped American politics. This documentary will examine how today's candidates and advocacy groups are trying to mobilize and attract this unpredictable group of voters. Will McCain manage to win back Latino defectors, in light of his party's harsh rhetoric on immigration? Will Obama succeed in securing the votes of the many Latinos who supported Hillary Clinton during the primaries? Another subject of inquiry will be the effectiveness - or lack thereof - of Latino politicians in advancing Latino interests and promoting Latino unity. As these politicians enter the upper echelons of American politics, they face inevitable pressure to abandon their ethnic identity and constituencies. Will the Latino electorate coalesce nonetheless, united around the immigration issue and hemispheric foreign policy considerations? Or will ethnic considerations be trumped by class, education and other factors?

This election year, the most crucial battleground states may fall far west of the Mississippi. Strategists say New Mexico, Nevada, and Colorado are pivotal to Senator McCain's success, so how are these voters being courted? This week, NOW on PBS travels to New Mexico to see how both campaigns are hoping to attract - and secure - first time voters on college campuses, as well as voters in New Mexico's large Hispanic population. It's clearly anyone's game - this southwestern state was won by fewer than 400 votes in 2000, and 6,000 votes in 2004. NOW sits down with New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson, a supporter of Barack Obama and a former 2008 presidential contender himself, who affirms the political importance of the "New West." "Had Kerry won those states [in 2004]," Richardson tells Maria Hinojosa, "even having lost Ohio, he'd be President." Will the New West play a key role in determining the fate of the country?

On June 22, 1969, the polluted Cuyahoga River caught fire. The river didn’t burn just in Cleveland -- it burned in the nation’s imagination. The country was beginning to pay attention to what was happening to its natural resources. The fire started a chain of events that hasn’t stopped yet. These include the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, Earth Day, the creation of environmental protection agencies at the federal and state levels and a rapidly growing consciousness in America about the environment. The Cuyahoga is America’s best example yet of a watery success story. The dead river came clean -- and back to life again.

Spanning the 1740s through the 1830s, the second hour explores the continued expansion of slavery in the colonies, the evolution of a distinct African-American culture and the roots of the emancipation movement. The episode reveals the many ways the enslaved resisted their oppression, their role on both sides of the Revolutionary War, and the strength and inspiration many of them found in the Declaration of Independence and Constitution, despite the inherent contradictions that lay in what the documents expressed and what the country practiced. Further emphasizing these inherent contradictions is the profile of the relationship between Thomas Jefferson - the man who wrote so eloquently about liberty - and his life-long servant Jupiter, one of 90 slaves on the Jefferson family plantation. Also featured is the story of Titus. Enslaved in central New Jersey, he fled his cruel master at the onset of the American Revolution and later returned to the area as "Colonel Tye," the leader of a band of black and white guerillas fighting for the British. In fact, far more black people fought for the British than for the colonists, believing they would be freed if the British proved victorious in the Revolution. The second hour introduces Mum Bett, whose successful lawsuit against her owner helped pave the way for the 1783 abolition of slavery in Massachusetts, and David Walker, whose landmark missive "An Appeal to the Colored Citizens of the World" marked the first expression of Black nationalism and terrified slave owners by urging black people to empower themselves.

The big bailout, the big debate - we take it all apart and put it together again, tonight on "Washington Week." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Nice to meet you. Can I call you Joe?" The vice presidential debate. Both candidates came with talking points prepared. Gov. Palin said, "I may not answer the questions the way that either the moderator or you want to hear, but I'm going to talk straight to the American people and let them know my track record also. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "Vice President Cheney has been the most dangerous president we've had probably in American history." And they met against the backdrop of another dramatic debate: this one in Washington. Pres. George Bush said, "There were moments this week when some thought that the federal government could not rise to the challenge." But after a week of acrimony and news of bad new job numbers, Congress finally passed the financial bailout bill. We look at the week's drama with the reporters covering it: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Less than a month before the election and the global financial markets are up in upheaval. Tonight, how the government, Wall Street, and Main Street voters are reacting. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill this week on "Washington Week." Sec. of the Treasury Henry Paulson said, "U.S. and global financial markets continue to be severely strained." And nowhere is that more evident than on Wall Street. It's also topic A for voters. Question at debate: "What's the fastest, most positive solution to bail these people out of the economic ruin?" Question at Debate: "During this economic crisis, I was wondering, what it is that's going to actually help those people out?" Question at debate: "How can we trust either of you with our money when both parties got us into this global economic crisis?" But there's something different going on out on the campaign trail. Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Our opponent is someone who sees America as imperfect enough to pal around with terrorists who targeted their own country." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Who is the real Senator Obama?" Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "What a majority of the American people are looking for - a steady hand, leadership, an optimist, not an angry man lurching from one position to another." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "This is the kind of erratic behavior we've been seeing out of Senator McCain." Character and the economy, and how they're framing the election that's just 25 days away, with the reporters who are covering the stories: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

For years, big business - from oil and coal companies to electric utilities to car manufacturers - has resisted change to environmental policy and stifled the debate over climate change in America and around the globe. Now, facing rising pressure from governments, green groups and investors alike, big business is promising to reshape its approach to the environment, fundamentally transforming the politics of the debate. FRONTLINE producer Martin Smith travels the globe to size up the climate problem firsthand and to test what big business is really doing to solve one of the most urgent issues of our time.

It is one of the most memorable presidential elections in decades. It is a race that pits the iconoclast John McCain against the newcomer Barack Obama; the heroic former prisoner of war against the first African-American major party nominee. For two hours, "The Choice," celebrating its 20th anniversary, examines the rich personal and political biographies of these men and goes behind the headlines to discover how they arrived at this moment and what their different candidacies say about America.

"Chicago 10" takes a stylized, innovative approach that gives contemporary history a forced perspective. Filmmaker Brett Morgen boldly mixes original animation with extraordinary archival footage to explore the buildup to and unraveling of the infamous conspiracy trial of the Chicago Seven. Set to the music of revolution then and now, "Chicago 10" is a parable of hope, courage and challenge as it portrays the struggle of young Americans attempting to confront an oppressive and armed government - their own. Terrence Howard hosts.

Battleground Virginia: Could a reliably Republican state turn blue? The state of Virginia has not voted for a Democratic President since 1964, but this year its 13 electoral votes are up for grabs as late polls show the race too close to call. This week, NOW on PBS goes behind the national polls and punditry and into the living rooms of real Virginia voters to learn how they'll be making their decisions. Military families, retirees, and blue-collar workers of all political stripes share their concerns about faith, the war, and making ends meet in troubling economic times.

Election 2008: Tough decisions for undecided women voters in the swing states. There are roughly eight million more female voters than male, and more women than men say they are still undecided. Senator Hillary Clinton and Governor Sarah Palin have undoubtedly changed the debate for many women voters, but the question is: how will they ultimately respond in the booth? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the swing state of Colorado to get insight from a diverse group of women. These pro-choice, pro-gun women don't fit into neat categories, but they do respond to issues built around working moms: pay equity, family leave, and child care. On the show, NOW also interviews former Vice Presidential Candidate Geraldine Ferraro for her take on the role of women in this election. Will the women's vote decide the election?

The final showdown between McCain and Obama, the government adds a bank bailout to its portfolio, and why attempts to register new voters might just become a federal case. I'm Gloria Borger sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." With 18 days to go before the election, the candidates are sharpening their messages making an appeal to middle class voters. For John McCain the symbol has become - "My old buddy Joe." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber," "Joe the Plumber." Combined with new energy. Sen. McCain said, "I'm an American and I choose to fight, fight for a new direction for our country. Fight for what's right for America." But can McCain's new focus slow down Obama's momentum? Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "You can't pay attention to polls. We've got to keep making our case for change. We've got to keep fighting for every vote. We've got to keep running through the finish line." The battle lines are clear. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the government is trying to stabilize an ailing economy this time propping up banks. Pres. George W. Bush said, "But these are not ordinary circumstances. We took this measure as a last resort." But is it enough? And while states prepare for what could be record voter turnout, a controversy about methods and tactics in registering new voters. A man in Ohio said, "We've seen in some communities as many as 12 applications from the same individual - different signatures, different handwriting." How bad a problem is it? Covering these stories this week, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Maggs of National Journal, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Under a dozen days to go. We look at battlegrounds, trends, and what to watch for on the final march to Election Day, tonight on "Washington Week." The sounds of the season. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I feel like we've got a righteous wind at our backs here, but we're going to have to work." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Thirteen days to go to the election and he changed his tax plan because the American people had learned the truth about it and they didn't like it. He'll say anything to get elected." Sen. Obama said, "He's been on the attack. That's what you do when you're out of ideas, when you're out of touch, and you're running out of time." Sen. McCain said, "We don't want a president who invites testing from the world at a time when our economy is in a crisis and Americans are already fighting in two wars." Add to that, Joe the plumber, Sarah Palin's price tags, and Joe Biden's assertion that Obama would face a crisis once elected. A critical week, a critical time, and the balance of power in Congress at stake as well. We'll talk about it all with David Shribman of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Boo! Tonight, Halloween brings us ghosts of the campaign past and the goblins of the election coming up. We'll give you a sneak peek tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "How many people have early voted? That's what I'm talking about." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "You vote for me, get out our vote, carry Ohio, win this election. I will never, never let you down." Gov. Sarah Palin (R-AK) said, "Only John McCain has the wisdom and experience to get our economy back on the right track." Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "I know Halloween is coming, but John McCain dressed up as an agent of change - that costume just doesn't fit, folks." It's down to hand-to-hand, vote-for-vote combat in a handful of critical states, as the candidates race from Ohio to Florida to Indiana to Pennsylvania, trying for a landslide or a comeback. We'll tell you what to watch for on Tuesday night with David Broder of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

In the wake of yet another hard-fought and bitter presidential campaign, FRONTLINE presents a biography of Lee Atwater, the charming, Machiavellian godfather of modern take-no-prisoners Republican political campaigns. Through eye-opening interviews with Atwater's closest friends and adversaries, the film explores the life of the controversial political operative who mentored Karl Rove and George W. Bush, led the GOP to historic victories, and wrote the party's winning playbook. The story tracks Atwater's rise from his beginnings in South Carolina as a high school election kingmaker all the way to the White House and his subsequent battle with cancer and final search for forgiveness and redemption. To Democrats, Atwater was a political assassin who one Congresswoman dubbed "the most evil man in America," but to Republicans he remains a hero for his deep understanding of the American voter and his unapologetic vision of politics as warfare.

How do American hosts entertain a monarch who has visited nearly every country on earth and dined with 10 U.S. presidents over the course of her 55-year reign? "The State Visit" follows the elaborate preparations as four localities get ready for a visit from the queen. At the site of the United States' first permanent British settlement in Jamestown, Virginia, the chief archeologist brushes up on royal etiquette. In Williamsburg, Virginia, nervous hotel staff make sure they prepare Her Majesty's room to an exacting standard of perfection. The White House hosts the first and only white-tie dinner of the administration and plans for every contingency, including canine misbehavior. In the royal household, they've invited celebrity photographer Annie Liebovitz for a formal photo shoot with the queen, although Liebovitz's request to seat

Her Majesty on a horse inside the state apartments proves a bit too much. In exclusive interviews, Liebovitz shares her desire to capture the essence of monarchy, First Lady Laura Bush personally leads a private tour of the White House and the queen's press secretary reveals the challenges of keeping up with her boss. Behind the scenes and at her side from beginning to end, "The State Visit" shows what it takes to plan and execute an official visit from the queen.

With the campaign and the election finally behind him, President-elect Barack Obama is now focusing on governing, but in which direction will he take the country? Charles Ogletree is in a unique position to know. The Harvard professor was an adviser to the university's Black Law Students Association when Obama was a member, and Ogletree has been a trusted advisor to Obama ever since. This week, David Brancaccio sits down with Ogletree, who some say is being considered for a top Justice Department position, to get early insight on what we might expect from an Obama Administration; Also, President-elect Barack Obama faces formidable challenges overseas. From the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq to national security issues such as the Iranian nuclear standoff and Middle East peace, Obama certainly has his work cut out for him. Obama has promised to fundamentally remake America's image in the world while addressing these issues, but can he succeed? George Packer, a staff writer and frequent war correspondent for The New Yorker Magazine, talks to NOW's David Brancaccio about the opportunities, challenges and uphill battles facing the president-elect.

President-Elect Barack Obama. Need I say more? Tonight, on "Washington Week." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer." From Tuesday's uplift to Friday's reality. Obama said, "Immediately after I become president, I'm going to confront this economic crisis head on." Obama's convincing victory as wide as it was deep. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "We fought. We fought as hard as we could. And though we fell short, the failure is mine, not yours." How did the Democrat do it? And what does he do now? We look back at a remarkable campaign and ahead to a challenging transition with the reporters who've been covering it: James Barnes of National Journal, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The economy - what's working? What's not? And the transition. Who's up? Who's down? Tonight, on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "History has shown that the greater threat to economic prosperity is not too little government involvement in the market. It is too much government involvement in the market." But the government is involved, called on to rescue banks, mortgage holders, and automakers. The next big debate in Washington, where does it all end? The other big debate - the Obama transition. Sen. Joe Biden (D-DE) said, "There is absolutely, absolutely total, complete, unadulterated cooperation and movement as if it's seamless." The president-elect comes to Washington, then retreats to Chicago. Can you stand the wait? Congress can't as they either set the stage or steal the march on his policy priorities. We take a look with Greg Ip of the Economist, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.

The assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on November 22, 1963 left a psychic wound on America that is with us still today. Few Americans then or now accept that a lone, inconsequential gunman could bring down a president and alter history. In that breach, a culture of conspiracy has arisen that points to sinister forces at work in the shadows. Drawing upon rarely seen archival footage and interviews with key participants, Oswald's Ghost takes a fresh look at Kennedy's assassination, the public's reaction to the tragedy, and the government investigations that instead of calming fears lead to a widespread loss of trust in the institutions that govern our society.

"March Point" follows the journey of three teens from the Swinomish Tribe who have been asked to make a film about the threat their people face from two local oil refineries. In the late 1950s, two refineries were built on March Point, an area that was once part of the Swinomish reservation by treaty. This is the story of the boys' awakening to the destruction these refineries have wrought in their communities. Ambivalent environmental ambassadors at the onset, the boys grapple with their assignment through humor, sarcasm and a candid self-knowledge. But as their filmmaking evolves, they experience the need to understand and tell their stories, and the power of this process to change their lives. By Tracy Rector and Annie Silverstein.

Robert Kuttner, author of the new book "Obama's Challenge," talks to NOW on PBS about the enormous obstacles to -- and potential solutions for -- getting America's economy back on track. Kuttner offers his advice on how Obama should stimulate a recovery: spending $600-700 billion per year over several years to fundamentally change the economy. "We need the government big time to prevent this from becoming the Great Depression II," Kuttner tells NOW's David Brancaccio. Will Obama usher in the most sweeping reforms since the New Deal to get the economy working again?

Congress bails out of the auto bailout, and Barack Obama's cabinet begins to take shape, tonight on "Washington Week." Rick Wagoner said, "This is all about a lot more than just Detroit. It's about saving the U.S. economy from a catastrophic collapse." The auto companies come to town hat in hand. Rep. Gary Ackerman (D-NY) said, "It's almost like seeing the guy show up at the soup kitchen in high-hat and tuxedo." But where was the love? Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Speaker of the House, said, "Until they show us the plan, we cannot show them the money." Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-CT) said, "No one can say that they didn't see this coming. Their companies have been struggling for years." Iraq, a hard place and a struggling economy even as the new cabinet begins to take shape with familiar faces and even more familiar ones. What do these first picks tell us about the incoming president? We'll ask the reporters covering it: Eamon Javers of Politico, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

"Chicago 10" takes a stylized, innovative approach that gives contemporary history a forced perspective. Filmmaker Brett Morgen boldly mixes original animation with extraordinary archival footage to explore the buildup to and unraveling of the infamous conspiracy trial of the Chicago Seven. Set to the music of revolution then and now, "Chicago 10" is a parable of hope, courage and challenge as it portrays the struggle of young Americans attempting to confront an oppressive and armed government - their own. Terrence Howard hosts.

How should President-elect Barack Obama handle our tricky relations with Pakistan? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with author and journalist Tariq Ali, who grew up in Pakistan, to discuss what he thinks team Obama should do to improve its standing in Pakistan in particular and the region as a whole. "I think it should back off militarily. That's the key," Ali tells NOW. Ali says the U.S.'s roughly 20 reported attacks against Al Qaeda inside Pakistan's borders since late August are doing more harm than good because they "mainly have hit civilian targets." The question of how to handle nuclear-armed Pakistan has become especially difficult amidst Indian claims of Pakistani links to the recent terrorist attacks in Mumbai, which left at least 170 people dead. What's the best strategy for the U.S. in Pakistan and how will it impact the war in Afghanistan, where Obama has said he plans to send more troops? Watch for an insider's view of how the president-elect should proceed; Also this week, Tehran-born author Hooman Majd talks to NOW's David Brancaccio about America's thorny relationship with Iran and how he thinks Obama should handle the problematic issue of Iran's nuclear program. "I think the main issue for Americans, and certainly for the [Obama Administration,] is how do we persuade Iran to not take that step? We can't take the knowledge away from them anymore," says Majd, who grew up in American and Britain, but often returns to Iran. Iran has produced enough nuclear material to produce a nuclear bomb, according to a report released last month from the International Atomic Energy Agency. Although Iran denies that its nuclear program has military aspirations, it has called for wiping out the state of Israel. What's the best way forward with this unpredictable country in Middle East?

Investing in America has been a global trend of the past decade. Now with global economic turmoil, many experts are discussing ways our country can invest in itself. On the campaign trail, Senator Barack Obama promised that his presidency would give America a boost through infrastructure projects - a trend that goes back at least as far as the canal building frenzy hundreds of years ago. To discuss what the coming Obama administration may do, Think Tank is joined by Robert Hormats - Vice Chairman of Goldman Sachs International and author of the important book "The Price of Liberty" that chronicles the cost of America's wars. It was published in 2007. The topic before the house: Investing in America - path to prosperity.

Bad economic news all over, uncertainty on the foreign policy front as well. What's next? Tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "We can't allow the auto industry simply to vanish." But the future of the auto industry is just the beginning of the problems facing the president-elect as he prepares to tackle a complicated new task. Jobs are going away. Industries are teetering. And our holiday season shopper is staying home. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Inaction is not the option here. We need to try and get something done." But who will take the needed action? As the Obama cabinet begins to take shape, new definitions of diversity. Obama said, "I assembled this team because I'm a strong believer in strong personalities and strong opinions." Covering the week David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

The bailout blowout and the strange twisted tale of a Senate seat for sale, tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We simply cannot ask the American taxpayer to subsidize failure." Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-MO) said, "Closing down the automobile industry in this country is not an option. No one would burn down their house to get rid of a rat." The surprise late-night collapse of the auto bailout - Detroit reels. And the White House considers stepping in after all. In Illinois, the corrupt and the profane. Federal Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald said, "The conduct would make Lincoln roll over in his grave." The FBI's Robert Grant said, "If it isn't the most corrupt state in the United States, it's certainly one hell of a competitor." As the feds take aim at Governor Rod Blagojevich. What did the President-elect know and when did he know it? President-elect Barack Obama said, "What I'm absolutely certain about is that our office had no involvement in any deal-making around my Senate seat." And the jobs picture, deeper and bleaker than it even looks. What can a new president do about it? Covering the week, David Sanger of the New York Times, Pete Williams of NBC News, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Santa Claus is coming to town, especially for GM and Chrysler. Plus, more of the naughty and the nice tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. George W. Bush said, "Under ordinary economic circumstances, I would say this is the price that failed companies must pay. These are not ordinary circumstances." The White House rides to the rescue with $17 billion for the auto industry. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "My top priority in this administration is going to be to create 2.5 million new jobs. And I want some of those jobs to be in the auto industry." Will it be the shot in the arm the economy needs? And as Barack Obama's cabinet and inauguration plans take shape, we take stock of the hits and the misses. Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill the number of open Senate seats are piling up. Who's in line? Caroline Kennedy said, "I told Governor Paterson that I'd be honored to be considered for the position of U.S. senator." And who's making things complicated? Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "I'm here to tell you right off the bat that I am not guilty of any criminal wrongdoing, that I intend to stay on the job, and I will fight this thing every step of the way." Also does a democratically controlled Congress automatically make life easier for the Democrat in the White House? If you said yes, you haven't been paying attention. Covering the stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times.
