| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 10 | 2/1/11 | 10:12:48 to 10:14:25 | | There's a movement within the US Border Patrol. Agents, hitting the books, training hard to become certified medical technicians or EMT's. They want to be ready to help anyone in the field, including themselves. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 5 | 2/4/11 | 5:14:02 to 5:16:08 | | Drug runners make a living shifting dope from Mexico into the U.S. Many use kids to do their dirty work, convincing them to smuggle the drugs over the border. It's become a big problem, and now Border Patrol agents are making their way into classrooms to try to curb the trend. News 4 introduced us to "Operation Detour." |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 5 | 2/8/11 | 4:58:58 to 5:01:20 | | As many as 1,000 agents and 250 additional officers will soon be patrolling the Southern Border, many in Arizona. Border Security Officers met to discuss what they've been dealing with, and their plans to increase their enforcement. The meeting was about the past,, present and future efforts along the border. When and how many of the 1000 agents and 250 CBP officers will come to Arizona was still up in the air, but they did say that Arizona, particularly the Tucson area, is one of the worst areas for illegal activity so a good chunk of those resources will be coming to Arizona. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 5 | 2/10/11 | 5:13:59 to 5:16:02 | | Arizona officials have a new way to fight illegal immigration... tracking all the trash. News 4 showed this new team effort and how it can help. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 10 | 2/18/11 | 10:12:43 to 10:14:50 | | The Nogales Border Patrol Station is not only the largest in the country but also the busiest. This station utilizes high tech and specialized units, like a bike patrol. They have more than 20 agents that pedal through traffic to respond to illegal border crossers, or drug smugglers before they can blend into the local population. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 5 | 2/23/11 | 5:12:48 to 5:14:43 | | UAV's, unmanned aerial vehicles, is a type of air surveillance the government uses to help patrol the border. Now scientists at the University of Arizona have developed a much smaller version called MAVS, Micro Aerial Vehicles. And they could play a big role in the future of our border security by helping law officers catch terrorists and drug smugglers and other intruders. The University of Arizona is among the world's leaders in advancing technology of tiny surveillance aircraft. |

| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 6 | 3/2/11 | 6:03:48 to 6:05:32 | | With 41 million dollars being funded by the Department of Homeland Security, the City of Nogales will begin several projects starting with a new look for the border fencing along the U.S./Mexico border. It will be an added improvement that the U.S. Border Patrol said will add security to the border of Nogales. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 10 | 3/8/11 | 10:12:13 to 10:14:19 | | Security at our border crossings and airports is always a big concern on the federal level. And just like the movies, artificial intelligence could, one day, assist the screenings. There's collaborative work, at the U of A, to make that concept a reality. The U of A has come up with a prototype that can analyze whether a person coming into the U.S. is being deceptive. Funding provided by the Department of Homeland Security has helped researchers make the concept a reality. It's still not perfect but according to researchers, the prototype could be duplicated and scattered through airports and border crossings around the U.S. within the next 3 to 5 years. Researchers also said the goal is not to replace humans but to facilitate border protection, overall. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 10 | 3/20/11 | 10:06:38 to 10:08:04 | | Some U of A students set up one of the largest mock border walls in the U.S. to express their concerns when it comes to immigration and border issues, and it's right in the middle of campus. The mock fence was set up on the U of A Mall that stretches nearly four football fields. Student organizers worked 8 months with several groups on campus to make it happen. The U of A students said this symbolic mock border fence was intended to cut off the freedom of movement of the entire campus community in order to demonstrate the effects of the actual wall along the U.S. Mexico border. But other students on campus said they don't like the idea of their campus being divided. The mock border wall was up for 10 days for students to send out their message. U of A campus police said they seen various demonstrations in the past but this one was the most extensive one yet. |
| Border/ Immigration | News 4 @ 10 | 3/25/11 | 10:04:07 to 10:05:49 | | Congressman Ted Poe, who has worked closely with Gabrielle Giffords, on border security, met with ranchers near Douglas, and also got a first hand look at the border fence there. These meetings were organized by Gifford's Office. He was very surprised he didn't see any border patrol agents for the 10 miles of fence they visited. Ranchers said the fence keeps out vehicles, not crossers. Congressman Poe said he will be working with Congresswoman Gifford's office to develop legislation to get more "boots on the ground." |
| Community | News 4 @ 4 | 1/3/11 | 4:21:54 to 4:25:44 | | A recent study from the National Institute of Drug Abuse said while tobacco use among teens is down, marijuana use is up. Some are blaming that on recent medical marijuana debates that may make pot seem less dangerous to teens. Dr. Jennifer Dvoskin, from Child and Family Resources, shared some information that every parent needs to know, like when you should start talking to your kids about drugs. |
| Community | News 4 @ 4 | 1/4/11 | 4:46:11 to 4:50:31 | Craig Wisnom, Bogutz & Gordon P.C. | More and more people are becoming landlords because they own property that they can't sell or don't want to sell right now in this market. Craig Wisnom, from Bogutz & Gordon, P.C., spoke about how you can protect yourself legally when you rent out your home. |
