Quarterly Report for July 2010-September 2010:
Significant issues covered by News

July 2010:

July started off with the GLBT community's 4th of July parade float being destroyed. It was set on fire the day before the parade was to take place. It had been in the annual Gay Pride Parade two weeks prior. The community felt it was a hate crime. Fire investigators ruled it arson. The GLBT community rallied and put together a new float. The new float won top prize.

A Coast Guard chopper based in Sitka was crashed in Seattle. It was headed back to Alaska. The entire crew on board died. There were memorials in Washington as well as Alaska.

We took a look at the increase number of earthquakes going on in and around the Anchorage bowl. We wanted to find out if the advancement of technology just being more accurate or if there was an actual increase.

The Taylor Highway fell victim to the summer rains. Parts of the roadway washed away. As a result, it impacted a search for a missing person in the area.

There was a debate going on in one Muni community about speed bumps and humps. Is it helping keep neighborhoods protected from speeders? Is it necessary? The debate also pitted some state leaders and the mayor over monies being allocated for the projects.

The debate over Muni employees being allowed to fundraise on 'company time' heated up again. It continued to focus on the Fill The Boot campaign put on by the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Anchorage Fire Department. The mayor says it's not a good idea. The Assembly and the Mayor had a showdown with the mayor ultimately vetoing the ordinance allowing employees to participate.

The end of the month saw tragedy strike Elemendorf Airforce base with the crash of one of it's C-17's. The crew was practicing for the air show that weekend when it crashed. No survivors.

August 2010:

August started off with another tragedy in the skies of Alaska. This time it was at Denali National Park where a cargo plane crashed. No survivors. It came on the heels of the C-17 crash in Anchorage. No connection but shed light on safety in the skies.

Mayor Sullivan gave the annual State of the City address.

The biggest story of the month was the Dillingham plane crashed that killed former Senator Ted Stevens and four others. Aside from the crash investigation, we took a look at the significance Stevens made on Alaska. We treated the loss of Stevens as a loss of one of the founding fathers of the State.

A big health issue that came up during the month was the nationwide egg recall.

The audit of the Begich administration was released. The mayor and some former Assembly members felt Begich left the Muni in bad shape before he left to become U.S. senator. Others on the assembly felt differently so an independent audit was ordered to sort it out.

Primary elections were held towards the end of the month with an upset in the U.S. Senate race. Incumbent Lisa Murkowski lost the primary to a Tea Party candidate....Joe Miller.

The month ended with the potential for another air tragedy. A search was underway for a missing plane from Katmai and it's crew.

September 2010:

The month kicked off with Primary Election folo....who's going to stay in the race and how? Lisa Murkowski decided to do a write in-campaign. If she wins, it would be a first for Alaska.

The annual State Fair pulled out a constitutional amendment debate. A man showed up at the fair with a political sign and was arrested. He was arrested for not leaving. He was yelling to the crowd that he had a right to be there b/c other political officials were there campaigning. It was all captured on video.

Memorial was held for the two officers from Honah who were gunned down last month during a stand-off.

There was a violent weekend in downtown Anchorage where one person was shot, near riot situations and beatings. We took a look at downtown crime.

The budget battle between the Anchorage School District and the Muni were a hot topic.

The PFD was announced.

Debate over genetically enhancing certain type of salmon here in Alaska was another hot topic.

We ended the month with a domestic violence report being released at the same time a husband was arrested and charged for shooting/killing his wife.
